Not illustrated. 1907 Excerpt: .the stools and the conditions of the stomach being carefully watched. These remarks of Lowenburg apply to the artificially fed baby and not to the breast fed baby that sometimes shows the effects of excess of fats in the mother s milk by looseness of the bowels, sourness of the stools, and rapid gain in flesh, that practically amounts to a pathological state. The breast fed baby often suffers from a lack of fat in the mother s milk, being stubbornly constipated until some form of fat is given with each nursing. Usually one or two teaspoonfuls of sweet, fresh cream with a very little sugar added will correct the constipation and the baby manifests no further digestive trouble. The food of the mother may be changed or rest from arduous labor enjoined to improve the quality of the breast milk and the nutrition of the child.--Woman s Medical Journal. Dry Hot Air in the Management of Some Common Pathological Conditions.--Skinner (Archives of Physiological Therapy, June, 1906) very aptly says in this admirable article, that the technical exposition of subjects belonging in the special fields of medical practice is rarely of much interest to the general practitioner, unless there is some point in the specialty which necessitates intimate contact between it and the daily routine of the physician. In these cases they may prove vitally interesting. Probably few of them are of greater interest and none of greater importance than those which involve the therapeutic application...
