Reviews

It is one of the most popular book. I am quite late in start reading this one, but better then never. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding. (Camille Larson)

Most of the boys wear their hair short, as is now the fashion in China. The little girls have their hair cut short just over the forehead, while the rest is allowed to grow long and is put up in a roll on the head. Many of the boys wear little round silk caps with red silk buttons on top, but most of the girls are bareheaded. The children at work in the fields have on straw hats as big around as a parasol. They are bent over and some have tucked up their clothes so that we can see only their yellow legs and their big hats. They look like huge birds in the green fields. The roads are crowded with men, women, and children dressed in bright colors. There are men on poles, trotting behind. There are men with loads on their backs, and men bent half double, pushing wheelbarrows loaded with Get out of the way of that wheelbarrow goods. There are rich men in gowns of bright silk or satin, and boys dressed in the same way. Here comes a little girl riding in a chair. She wears clothes made of red satin. The chair is carried by men dressed in blue cotton. It is held up between two long poles that rest upon their shoulders. It bobs up and down as they trot along. Behind them is a rude cart hauled by a mule, and still farther back come...
