Ladies and Gentlemen: To-Day we celebrate our Thirtieth Commencement. As the life of man is measured, a generation has passed away since the opening of Cornell University in 1868. In this interval, the stream of time has wafted into the Unseen World most of those who took part in the formal exercises of Inauguration. The heroic Founder, Ezra Cornell; the Chancellor of the State Board of Regents, J.V.L. Pruyn; the representatives of the Trustees, Erastus Brooks and George H. Andrews; the spokesman of the Faculty, William Channing Russel; and those brilliant delegates from the republic of Science and Letters, Louis Agassiz and George William Curtis; every one of them has walked the way of Nature; And to our purposes he lives no more.
